Six Things Every New Mother and Mother-to-Be Should Know About Maternal Depression

1. Maternal depression is common.

It is the number one complication of pregnancy. In the United States, 15 to 20 percent of new moms, or about 1 million women each year experience perinatal mood and anxiety disorders, and some studies suggest that number may be even higher.

YOU ARE NOT ALONE.

Maternal depression can affect any woman regardless of age, income, culture, or education.

2. You might experience some of these symptoms:

- Feelings of sadness
- Mood swings: highs and lows, feeling overwhelmed
- Difficulty concentrating
- Lack of interest in things you used to enjoy
- Changes in sleeping and eating habits
- Panic attacks, nervousness, and anxiety
- Excessive worry about your baby
- Thoughts of harming yourself or your baby
- Fearing that you can't take care of your baby
- Feelings of guilt and inadequacy
- Difficulty accepting motherhood
- Irrational thinking; seeing or hearing things that are not there

Some of the ways women describe their feelings include:

- I want to cry all the time
- I feel like I'm on an emotional roller coaster
- I will never feel like myself again
- I don't think my baby likes me
- Everything feels like an effort

3. Symptoms can appear any time during pregnancy, and up to the child's first year.

Baby blues, a normal adjustment period after birth, usually lasts from two to three weeks. If you have any of the listed symptoms, they have stayed the same or gotten worse, and you're five to six weeks postpartum, then you are no longer experiencing baby blues, and may have a perinatal mood or anxiety disorder.

4. You did nothing to cause this.

You are not a weak or bad person. You have a common, treatable illness. Research shows that there are a variety of risk factors that may impact how you are feeling, including your medical history, how your body processes certain hormones, the level of stress you are experiencing, and how much help you have with your baby. What we do know is, THIS IS NOT YOUR FAULT.
